Would Finance Hard Surfacing Highway Program

Will Alberta see a program of hard surfaced roads initiated by the new provincial Government in the next year? That is a question which is creating much attention now in road construction and motor driving circles.

Recently there was a report that three major oil companies operating in this province are considering a plan under which they would finance the building of paved or hard surfaced roads if the government would rebate to them 1¢ per gallon of gasoline tax revenue each year until the advance was repaid. It was estimated that this rebate would amount to $300,000 a year.

While no proportion of the kind has been submitted, the government is known to be interested in the suggestion. If the proposal is made, it no doubt will receive every consideration.

One prominent member of the government has already expressed the opinion that a great mistake was made when Alberta did not commence years ago in building hard surfaced highways. If that had been done the province would have been saved its heavy maintenance costs during recent years.

The Alberta Motor Association, particularly its president A. B. Mackay, has given much time to pointing out that Alberta has a crying need for hard surfaced roads if this province is to reap full benefits from the lucrative tourist trade now anxious to enter the province in ever increasing volume.

Brother Church Notes

The Pastor will speak at both services next Lord's Day. Every body welcome.

The Sunday morning service will be of special interest to all members of the congregation. There will be some special features in the evening service at 7:30. Note change in time.

Light, Streamlined Locomotives, C.P.R. For Eastern Run

Canadian Pacific Railway head office announced on Nov. 5 the construction of five light-weight streamlined locomotives to be placed in service between Montreal and Quebec. The announcement said the locomotive being built to attain a speed of 110 miles per hour, would be the first of a new series to be constructed. Light-weight coaches weight will make up the new trains.

MILO NOTES

John Glambeck died from paralytic stroke at the General Hospital, Calgary, last Sunday. He was one of the founders of the U.F.A. movement, and homesteaded in our district.

The moving of William Burke and family into Milo is another addition to the residential district of our town.

Mr. and Mrs. St Peter experienced a miserable trip from Champion last Saturday and Sunday. They enjoyed shoveling through snowbanks and alding into ditches.

Friends and visitors of Mr. E. Beechman are led to wonder if he is planning to take up the hair dressing business. Probably Mrs. Wynne Hardy could tell us.

Howard St Peter and sister, Fatsy Anna are now victims of the mumps.

Mrs. Leverette has been ill lately and is under the care of Dr. Scott. We hope that she will soon be on the way to recovery.

Owing to the stormy weather conditions last Friday, Jack Bushell was forced to postpone his wedding dance for a second time.

Happenings In and Around Arrowwood

A dance will be held in the Mossleigh Community Hall on Friday, Nov. 15th, music by the Len Davis Orchestra.

Sixty-six people attended the Sunday School last Sunday at the Church of the Brethren. The church was warm a special feeling of fellowship prevailed. All services as usual next Sunday.

Moses Gaylen Jones and Omer Larson returned home Wednesday evening of last week from the Castle district, where they had been hunting. They were successful in bringing home with them two fine specimens of antelope.

Miss Rosemary Lord assumed duties as assistant operator at the local telephone exchange this week. Miss Millicent Taylor is now chief operator at this point, having advanced to that position this week when Miss Alice Archambault finished her duties prior to going to Vulcan.

The following items of local interest appeared in last week's issue of the Brooks Bulletin on Tuesday evening, "News of Brooks 22 years ago."

"Constable and Mrs. Hesketh have returned after spending several days in Calgary." The Constable was giving evidence at the sitings of the criminal court."

Rev. and Mrs. John Wiesand drove to Calgary Thursday, accompanied by Miss Andrews and Miss Dukes, of the Arrowwood teaching staff. From Calgary Rev. Mr. Wiesand went to Stettler. He returned on Friday, accompanied by Misses Mary and Eva Grabill, who came for the Bible School. About six inches of snow fell during the night of the return trip, making travelling rather uncertain.

Cardinals Hockey Club Reorganize

The Arrowwood Senior hockey club held its annual meeting Wednesday last to organize for the coming season activities. A fairly large crowd assembled and considerable enthusiasm was manifested. A fair season was reported last year and this year is to be even better. The Blackfoot League may be broadened to consist of teams from Blackfoot, Brant, Red Cross, Mossleigh, Arrowwood and Milo. Already arrangements are being made to attempt the formation of such a league.

Manager Eddie Lewendon and sec.-tress. H. McCullough were re-elected to the club official roster.

The Cardinals are staging a big Hockey Dance in the school auditorium Fri. Nov. 23. The Rhythm Boys orchestra from Champion have been engaged to supply the music. A good time is assured.

Ambitious Amateurs

Half an hour a week for ambitious amateurs. Thirty minutes every Saturday night at 7 p.m. over CFAC in Calgary. Set aside for those who would like the opportunity of making known to the radio audience solos, duets, trios, ensembles, comedy acts, whistlers, yodelers, instrumentalists, in fact anything that can be presented through a microphone, will be given at least a moment or two in which to hazard the public fancy. Previous tryouts will not be necessary for Ambitious Amateurs, but entries will only be taken by mail. Letters should be addressed to Amateur Program, Radio Station CFAC, Southern Bldg., Calgary giving details of the act and stating whether or not accompaniment will be required. CFAC staff musicians will be on hand to assist all amateurs who desire a musical background, or accompaniment. Listeners of course are invited to send along their card or letter commenting on the Ambitious Amateurs.

Banff Man Invents Metal "Flying Man"

The dream of a lifetime, a flying suit, making it possible for a man to fly without the aid of aeroplane, is near realization for John Kropoz, a 65 year old inventor, according to claims he has advanced.

Kropoz, a native of Jugoslavia, who quit his job in a local hotel to devote his whole time to the perfection of a flying suit, claims that he had completed a model, which in tests at Banff had proved its efficiency.

The inventor has completed an aluminum suit with metal wings and a series of springs operated on the principle of the gramophone.

Once started the machine may be pedaled by a device for that purpose. The wearer would have to jump from a height to get into the air. In a test the model flew more than two miles.

Support the Hokey Club by attending their dance in the school on Friday, Nov. 22.

Navy League Does Valuable Work

Rallying to support the Navy League of Canada in its work of assisting widows and orphans of men of Merchant Marine Services Arrowood citizens subscribed $8 to this cause in a recent campaign conducted by Fred Cooke, organizer of the Alberta Division. Contributions may be sent to Fred Cooke, 1107-15th Ave. W., Calgary.

John Glambeck Called by Death

John Glambeck, of Milo, one of the best known pioneer farmers of Alberta, died at the General Hospital, Sunday, at midnight, following a paralytic stroke. He was one of the founders of the U.F.A. movement and homesteader in the Milo district where he developed a fine fruit experimental farm.

Mr. Glambeck was 72 years of age.

During the Christmas season complaints often come to us from farmers who shipped consignments of turkeys to firms in Vancouver in response to advertising and mail circulars.

Practically nothing. The ultimate result in many instances is that the farmer receives practically nothing. New firms arise and others have a change of name each year for this reasonable trade. As a protection of the farmer it is of importance that they look into this matter carefully before shipping.

Mr. Glambeck was 72 years of age.

BEST FOR YOU take any preparation you don't know all about, for the simple reason that it may contain the pain of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, and your doctor what he thinks it is—in composition with "Aspirin."

We say this because, before the discovery of "Aspirin," most so-called "pain remedies" were devised against physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And, as a result, the use of "Aspirin" largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken "Aspirin" are in and out without ill effect, have proven the safety of their findings since its safety was correctly discovered.

Remember this—"Aspirin" is not a pain remedy, but a pain killer discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

SYNOPSIS

Nancy Nelson is a sun-bleached, gay irreproachable girl of nineteen, with no cause beyond the choice of her costume for the coming-out party. She is the daughter of the Amish farmer, Mr. Edgeman, whose father lost all he had, and his mother, Mrs. Edgeman, who died at the sight of a simpler method of living. At this juncture a letter is received from the Amish people, who, like her, are Amish, who offers the girl a home on what seems to be impossible conditions.

After much consideration, Cousin Christopher is accepted. Cousin Nancy and her family move to Pine Ridge. Nancy set out one afternoon to climb the hill to the top so as to obtain a view of the surrounding landscape and mazes the path. Aurora, the Amish girl, follows her. The path comes along the road, driven by Mattie Adams, and she asks him which way to go. He says, "Just look around, and then go on to Cousin Columbine's." There! Mark Adams, the son of the Amish man who has broken his leg, and that Jack Nelson has been hired to help out. Mattie lets the two girls follow Jack away. Nancy finds that she is lost, and having no money to pay for a ride, she goes to the public library at Pine Ridge and reads the old books, starting a public library. She sends all the books they could spare and all they could induce others to give.

Nancy's parents and friends gave their liberal support to her request for a change of life, and she is in due course. Father Adam painted a sign for the library, and the Adams boy, Mattie, is given the job of putting books and decorations to make the room look presentable.

Mr. Edgeman, Mattie, Adam, and Nancy go to the prairie home of Mattie's uncle for the ride, and after Mattie has been sent home, the three are caught in a blizzard. Blinded by the swirling snow they collide with a bus and are thrown from it. The bus stalled across the road with its back wheels resting in a snow-filled gully. That night Mattie and Adam, and Nancy stay with the children and all they can to help. The next morning they wait for the bus to come back, and he succeeds in finding help and the party of children and Nancy are rescued. As a result of the exposure Nancy's feet are badly frozen and Jack is seriously ill with pneumonia, but both of them recover.

Now Go On With The Story

"It's fortunate they're so much taller than the fence," said Jack. "I suppose they were intended to be imposing; but we can lower them a foot without hurting the appearance of—" (the glass door to be sure that Cousin Columbine was near), "this magnificent property!" Fall to, Sir, and get busy with that shovel!"

The girl obeyed, rather enjoying the novelty of the task, and the cold, while the men worked, continued chattering.

"In this place? More likely it's a home some dog has buried!"

Nancy laughed.

"It was an energetic dog then, or a good one now," said Mattie, "or lower down than yours, Jack, and I've gone a good bit deeper. Perhaps there's enough of a hole here now; but I want to see what this is." She stopped the spade, digging a moment's vacuity. "It certainly feels like a rock, Jack."

Nance ceased abruptly, and dropping flat onto the ground, reached into the new-made hole while her broad watch, a smile of amusement lighting her face.

"For the land's sake what are you doing! On your stumppin' in all that dirt?" cried out Aurora, who had drawn near to superintend the work.

"Hunting for buried treasure," Jack answered, grinning. "Pieces of eight, you know. She thinks she's found—"

"I have!" cried Nancy, scrabbling up in great excitement. "Give me the shovel, Jack, and I'll show you what's all this commotion!" demanded Cousin Columbine, who, hearing Nancy's elated voice, had hurried out. "Mercy, child! have you been digging that hole with your two hands?"

Nancy laughed, and answered: "It all come out in the wash, Cousin Columbine! You see, I've uncovered something down there—something that's evidence enough for a trial. I thought at first it was a hole, but it has sharp corners—like a metal box! Did your people ever hide any valuable things way in time of Indian raids?"

The old lady shook her head, and replied: "Not that I know of. Try the thing out with your crowbar, Jack, but go gently and then to look about for any possible treasure." She always gave her: wondering why, when these months in Pine Ridge had gone so well and she was eager to see the family, that horrid homesickness kept coming over her.

"It must be because Edgeman's far away," she mused, "and Cousin Columbine hates so to have us go. And there are the Adams! It would be nice to have them here again."

"I'll be off to call up some picture, and her color rose as she said impatiently: "Why don't you face the truth, Nancy Nelson? You just can't bear to leave because—"

The door opened.

"Do you mind if I interrupt you for a moment?"

In my own mind there's not a doubt that they came back on one of the Spanish expeditions. Dear me! what a story we shall have to tell the Adams! Did Mark say what time they would send down for us?"

"Not yet, but I have some time to kill at the library this afternoon, and I must finish packing so that to-morrow will be free. It gives me a terrible feeling, Cousin Columbine, to think how soon we're going to leave you."

"At least it gives Miss Columbine a woman to depend on," declared Aurora as she thumped an apple pie on the table. "Pine Ridge won't never be the same again, if you ask me—not that it won't never be the same again. I'm going to bring Wincarsin to him, and I'll get him to give you some good vitamins and minerals."

"I'm afraid I've got a bad cold," said Mattie, "but I'll get along with you, I suppose."

"I was an energetic dog then, or a good one now," said Mattie, "or lower down than yours, Jack, and I've gone a good bit deeper. Perhaps there's enough of a hole here now; but I want to see what this is."

Nancy laughed.

"It was an energetic dog then, or a good one now," said Mattie, "or lower down than yours, Jack, and I've gone a good bit deeper. Perhaps there's enough of a hole here now; but I want to see what this is."

Water

"Water, water everywhere, and not a drop to drink!" was the complaint of the thirsty Ancient Mariner, as he viewed the salt sea water which surrounded him. "Water, water in plenty, but not a drop fit to drink!" might be the cry of many Canadians if they knew that their drinking water was contaminated with the germs of disease.

Those who live in cities and towns generally enjoy a safe water supply. From bitter experience they learned that sickness and death were the price of polluted water. Freedom from water-borne diseases is the dividend received in such communities as have spent the money required for purification of water supplies.

But what of the rural areas? Unfortunately, the satisfactory progress has not been made in many parts of our country. The ill effects of one polluted well are not as evident as are those of the contaminated water supply of a city, because the numbers who use any one well are comparatively few. Nevertheless, for those who do use it, the results are the same in that the same diseases attack them as occur in the city.

Typhoid fever, which is frequently water-borne, used to be fairly common disease in cities and towns. Now it is a rare disease, and is practically unknown where water and milk supplies are taken care of. Typhoid fever is not by any means a rare disease in many rural areas, and most of the cases seen in city hospitals have been contracted in the country. It is difficult to persuade many rural people that the well or the spring which they have used for years may not be a safe supply. They forget that people move around a great deal, and that some day a carrier of typhoid fever germ may visit them, and then, if the well is not constructed so that it will be protected from sources of the privy or cesspool, they will be drinking the germs of typhoid fever.

In all our provinces, water examinations are made by the laboratories of the provincial health departments. There is one simple way of finding out whether or not the water subjected to certain tests which will reveal the presence or absence of pollution. There is no time better than the present to do this. Pure water means safety.

Force of Habit

What would you do if you won a big sweepstake? Would you throw your hat up in the air and let out a big whoop, or pinch yourself? Or run and tell your friends about it, or arrange a big party and celebrate? The chances are that you would do something like that before.

The other day the wife of a gas station operator was frying bacon for dinner when she was notified she had won a sweepstake. What did she do? She went on frying bacon watching carefully to see that it did not burn. It takes time to adjust oneself to a big shock and in the meantime it carries one along. During a recent earthquake a street cleaner in a certain city was at work when the tremors began. He was observed to continue working and shovelling while he watched in amazement at the rocking buildings and trembling pavement. The shock was so great that it left him unconsciously going on with things habit had made automatic. In the east a man who ran a small shop was working right through the night.

The next morning he went to work as usual, saying he didn't know anything else to do to have more fun. The habit of a lifetime won't change overnight even for vast sums of money.

A sudden change in the ways a person lives is as difficult as a sudden change in direction by a speeding automobile. The centrifugal force of habit persists.

The great majority of us under the sudden shock of altered conditions, would show us the same characteristics as a feed store driver who had never taken a day off in fifty years.

He was given a weeks vacation and spent the time loafing around the store.
